

European Intensive Programme (IP)

“Translating God(s): Fluid Religions and Orthodoxy”

September 9-22, 2012 in Constantia / Romania

Dublin, January 19, 2012

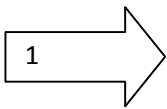

HOW TO PARTICIPATE

Dear Postgraduate Student of Theology, Religious Studies, and Cognate Fields,

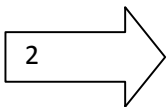

(PhD Students and Advanced Master Students)

Thank you for your interest in our unique European Intensive Programme, bringing together 60-80 postgraduate students and 20 professors from across Europe and – upon special permission – from outside of Europe for 2 intensive weeks of learning and exchange. Please, have a look at the preliminary programme outline at our website:

<http://www.ecumenics.ie/resources/students/european-programmes/constantia-2012/>

The regular nomination and registration process goes via our partner universities (see relevant files on the IP website). Upon registration via these universities, you are guaranteed reimbursement of travel costs and get full board (meals) and accommodation for free. Please, use the appropriate “nomination form” and “student self-registration forms”. Sign the “student self-registration form” and send it as a PDF scan no later than April 1, 2012 to: translating.gods@tcd.ie.

We also welcome self-registered individual applicants (PhD students only) from other universities from across Europe and the world. In general, these participants need to cover their own travel expenses and will be charged Euro 500 for accommodation and meals throughout the programme. Use the “student self-registration form”, sign it and send it as a PDF scan no later than April 1, 2012 to: translating.gods@tcd.ie.

Please, read the INFO PAGE 2, listing the tasks, requirements, benefits etc.

Attached to here, you also find the “student self-registration form” (3 pages).

We appreciate your interest and look forward to possibly see you in Constantia.

Best,

Dr. Norbert Hintersteiner

Coordinator

Tasks, Requirements, Benefits for Student Participants:

1. Before April 1, 2012, students nominated by their local coordinator need to postmail their registration form with details on payment of registration fee of Euro 100 (Western Europe; World) or Euro 50 (Eastern Europe) and submit an 8-line abstract for their essay / presentation on a topic suited for one of listed themes of the IP. The appended 2-page STUDENT REGISTRATION FORM must be used.
2. One student from each university serves as student representative from the partner institution and helps the local coordinator facilitate the preparatory process and also during the actual IP.
3. Registered students write a 15-20 pages essay (Times New Roman, 12 pt, 1.5 space) under supervision of local coordinators, and submit it per email to the IP coordinating office by June 1, 2012 at translating.gods@tcd.ie.
4. During the IP, students give an academic 20-minutes presentation of their submitted essay, followed by a 10 minute discussion in so-called "research presentation sessions". Students will find their presentation dates on the IP website by July 1, 2012.
5. After 2-weeks IP, students need to revise their essay under supervision of their professor and based on the learning process and discussions during the IP, and submit it to their local coordinator / supervisor at the home institution for grading (only for participants of partner universities).
6. Upon successful IP participation, students receive a joint certificate from Trinity College Dublin and University of Constantia confirming successful participation and a workload of 10 ECTS.
7. Together with an official grade on their revised final essay from their local coordinator / supervisor / professor, this certificate will allow students to seek acknowledgment of these credits to their respective study programmes at their home institution as determined appropriate by their home institution (only for participants of partner universities).
8. For participants registered, we will provide a list of 4 new books and 8 articles important for the theme, which all participants need to have worked through and read in preparatory seminars or on their own before the IP in September.
9. Selected participants from partner universities will receive travel reimbursement up to Euro 300 (only when staying the required full time period of the IP), free accommodation and full subsistence / meals for the duration of the IP programme in Constantia.
10. The IP coordinating office will not buy e-tickets for registered participants, but participants need to make their own travel arrangements (including visa, if necessary). For reimbursements they need to bring their travel documentation and boarding passes; additionally a distinct reimbursement form will be sent to them in advance.
