

M.Phil. in Conflict Resolution and Reconciliation

Trinity College Dublin | at Belfast

Trinity's M. Phil. in Conflict Resolution and Reconciliation is taught at our specialist cross-border school in Belfast and at partner sites. The programme allows students to specialise in either Conflict Resolution or Reconciliation Studies, or take a broader 'joint course' across both areas.

Master in Conflict Resolution

Searching for shared solutions

Master in Reconciliation Studies

Learning to transform structures and relationships

The M. Phil. equips graduates for work with local and international organisations, and provides transferable skills for a wide variety of careers including mediation, diplomacy, policy, advocacy, journalism, teaching, ministry and Ph.D. research. Students select 60 ECTS of taught modules and submit a 30 ECTS dissertation.

Trinity's M. Phil. Programme at Belfast

The M. Phil. in Conflict Resolution and Reconciliation is a creative and innovative course, which brings together two complementary fields responding to conflict and its aftermath in Ireland and around the world.

If you are interested in a skills-based professional course taught in short-block intensives, and in partnership with professional organisations at the forefront of the field, see our Master in Conflict Resolution at www.tcd.ie/ise/resolution.

If you are interested in the wider social, political, ethical and theological aspects of reconciliation taught throughout the semester see our Master in Reconciliation Studies at www.tcd.ie/ise/reconciliation.

You can combine modules from both fields if you wish, and modules for the M. Phil. in International Peace Studies, and the M. Phil. in Intercultural Theology and Interreligious Studies (both taught in Dublin) are also open to students on the M. Phil. in Conflict Resolution and Reconciliation programme.
